

Everything your league needs, already built.

Scheduling, standings, registration, payments and a public page your players can actually use — running real seasons in Toronto today. You keep every dollar of the fee you set. And if something doesn't fit how your league works, it usually changes the same day.

A season in a minute Round robins, tiers, ladders, pools and brackets — drawn across every gym and court you have.	Scores from captains' phones Standings rank themselves from confirmed results. Nobody types a spreadsheet.
Registration that fills itself Caps, waitlists, free agents and team sign-ups on a link you share.	Paid before the season Card, split between players, or e-transfer straight to you.
A page players use Schedule and standings, no login — and embeddable in your own site.	Free to organize No setup fee, no subscription. Fees are added on top and paid by whoever pays.

THE SHORT VERSION

What you stop doing

- Rebuilding the schedule by hand every time a team drops out or a gym falls through.
- Chasing scores on Tuesday night and typing them into a spreadsheet on Wednesday.
- Tracking who has paid across e-transfers, cash and memory.
- Answering "when do we play?" forty times a week in a group chat.

This is the whole app to your players

One link. No account, no download, no group chat archaeology. Every screen below is a real league running on mysportsapp right now — you can open it yourself at www.mysportsapp.ca/l/lakeshore-indoor-6s-demo.

How rankings are calculated:

by matches won, then set ratio (SW / SL), then point ratio (PF / PA), then head-to-head among teams still tied.

GP games played / scheduled · MW/ML matches won/lost · SW/SL sets · PF/PA points · Ratio = PF / PA

The standings. Nobody types this. It is derived from confirmed scores every time the page loads, ranked by matches won, then set ratio, then point ratio, then head-to-head. The week columns show the season as it happened, and the note underneath tells players the order so you don't have to answer it.

Every team e-transfers	$10,000.00	$10,000.00	$200.00
Figures produced by the same code that creates the charges, at today's rates: $20 per team, or $3 per player when a team splits it. Tournaments and King of the Court are 1% of entry. A free league costs nothing.

WHY YOUR COLUMN NEVER MOVES

Processing and platform fees are added on top, not taken out. Set $1,000 and you bank $1,000 — no reconciling a deposit that arrived short, no explaining to your treasurer where $37 went.

Splitting is slightly cheaper for the team and slightly cheaper for us. A team that e-transfers pays no processing at all.

HOW SPLIT PAYMENT WORKS

Nobody fronts a thousand dollars

- The captain registers and lists the roster. The fee divides evenly — $1,000 across six becomes $175.05 each.
- Every player gets their own link and pays their own share. Nobody chases anybody for e-transfers.
- You watch it fill up on the payments page — who has paid, who hasn't, what's outstanding.
- The team is confirmed the moment the last share lands, and appears in the schedule and standings.

- A player short? Let them play while they still owe, take the rest by e-transfer, or refund the ones who paid — all from the same page.

SCHEDULING

Draw a season in a minute

Leagues

Round robin across your weekly slot, any number of rounds. Add teams mid-season and it schedules them into the weeks that haven't been played.

Ladders

Drawn a week at a time, teams moving up and down on the night's results. You choose how many swap at each boundary.

King of the Court

Continuous-play format with its own scoring, stages and live scoreboard.

Courts and referees

Court assignment balances the good courts fairly across teams. Refs are drawn from whoever is sitting out, spread evenly.

Tiers and divisions

Each tier is its own mini-league with its own schedule, standings and registration cap.

Tournaments

Pools with snake seeding, then a single-elimination bracket seeded off pool finish. Multi-day supported.

Several gyms at once

Nine divisions across six buildings, each with its own courts and start time. Pin a tier to a gym and it plays there every week.

When plans change

Push the season back a week, reschedule one game, or reoptimise around a lost venue — without redrawing everything.

RESULTS

Scores that arrive on their own

Captains enter scores

From their phone, on their own games. You decide whether captains, referees or only organizers can score — and whether a result needs confirming by the other side.

It knows the format

Best-of-three, two fixed sets, single set, hard caps, time caps. A score that can't have happened is refused as it's typed.

Standings derived, never typed

Ranked live from confirmed scores using the OVA tiebreaker hierarchy, or point differential if your rules use it.

Nobody forgot

A nightly nudge goes to the people who could have entered a missing score, so standings don't quietly rot.

Player stats

Sets played, win rate, points for and against, and a clutch record — games won or lost by two points or fewer.

An audit trail

Every score change is recorded with who made it, so a disputed result has an answer.

FILLING THE LEAGUE

Registration that runs itself

A page you can share

Your own registration link with your blurb, venues, format and how many spots are left. Teams sign up and invite their own players.

Caps that hold

A limit for the whole league and a limit per tier. Two captains racing for the last spot can't both get it.

Players without a team

Free agents sign up on their own, saying which positions they play and what level they're at. You form teams from the list.

Waitlist

When you're full, teams queue instead of going elsewhere. A spot that frees is offered to the next in line automatically, held for a window you set, then passed on.

YOUR PLAYERS

Where everyone looks things up

A public page

Schedule, standings, teams and stats — no login, no app to install. It opens on the next night to be played, because that's the question people are asking.

Emails that matter

Invitations, weekly "here's your week", schedule changes, results, payment receipts. Players choose what they receive.

Printable and postable

A clean printed schedule for the gym wall, and a QR code that takes players straight to the live page.

On your own website

Drop the schedule and standings into your site, styled in your colours. It updates itself as scores come in.

Message your league

Send everyone — or one tier, or one team — a note about a cancellation or a playoff date.

Helpers

Add a co-organizer to run one league with you, without giving them everything else.

SPORTS AND FORMATS

Built for how you actually play

Indoor 6s

Beach 2s

Co-ed 4s

Softball

Formats come as presets — best of five to 25, two sets to 21 with a tiebreak to 11 capped at 45 minutes, single set to 21, seven innings with ties allowed — or you set your own targets, margins and caps. Softball brought fields, umpires, runs and drawn games; the scheduling engine never cared what sport it was, so adding another is a small job rather than a rebuild.

THE PROMISE

If it doesn't fit your league, it changes

Every league has a rule nobody else has. A tier where the top team comes in an hour late so they get a proper break. Scores capped at 21 from next week but not retroactively. Two teams down instead of one.

Changes like those usually ship in under a day — often the same afternoon. You describe how your league really runs; it gets built that way, tested against your actual season, and you see it live before your next game night.

Every example above is a real request from a Toronto organizer, built and running.

GETTING STARTED

What the first week looks like

- Tell us your format. Nights, courts, gyms, how many teams, how you score.
- Your league is set up for you — teams, tiers, venues and a drawn schedule you can look over before anyone sees it.
- Share one link. Captains claim their teams and invite their players.
- Play. Scores come in from captains' phones and the standings keep themselves.

Free for organizers. No setup fee, no subscription, no contract.

Have a season coming up? Send the format and we'll have it drawn and ready to look at.
